

A "Worried" Chairman Vinson Asks SecDef For Full Report On Pentagon "Reorganization"; Launches Private G-2 Action

CHAIRMAN Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee says he is "worried" about the current internal "reorganization" of the Pentagon. He has asked Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara for a full report on the situation.

An avowed foe of over centralization in defense planning, the powerful House Chairman also has sent out informal intelligence feelers to determine the extent to which military leaders and the Service Secretaries are being by-passed in the formulation of Pentagon policy. In an exclusive interview with THE JOURNAL, Chairman Vinson said he is "determined that the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force must not be forced out of the Defense Department chain of command."

Chairman Vinson said he is "alarmed" by the rash of news stories underscoring purported cleavage between the military and civilian leaders of the Defense Department.

He recalled that the record of the 1958

Pentagon Reorganization Act specifically prescribes that the Assistant Secretaries of Defense shall be "staff assistants" to the Secretary of Defense. He said he is double-checking to assure that the Pentagon "vice presidents" are not extending their authority into the field of operations.

Chairman Vinson indicated that he has not been kept posted on all of the developments taking place at the Pentagon. In the past, it has been the practice of Defense leaders to keep the Chairmen of the House and Senate Armed Services Committees advised of policy changes.

The House Chairman disclosed that he wrote to Secretary McNamara on 23 May outlining his concern and requesting details about recent behind-the-scenes policy shifts at the Pentagon. He said he "preferred not to make the letter public at this time."

A Pentagon Fable

ONCE upon a time there lived in a city—some informed sources said it was in New England—a distinguished group of dedicated professional scholars. They worked hard and long at their assigned and self-appointed tasks. As the years went by, they survived rigorous selection procedures and were advanced in rank from instructor to professor. A few who were particularly brilliant were chosen from below the zone of consideration and were given endowed chairs.

Then it happened suddenly that one day, toward the beginning of a semester, the career scholars welcomed a new president to their campus. The new president was a retired general. (In maritime areas, the new president sometimes is identified as a retired vice admiral with nuclear power experience).

The authoritative word on the campus was that the board of regents or overseers, as they sometimes were known, had chosen the general because of his outstanding record in the Armed Forces. The point was made with confidence that he had great experience in leading men in combat, and therefore certainly would be able to end inter-departmental controversy in the Academic Senate.

The general, who had been offered a high-paying position with stock options in industry, accepted the challenging campus position at great personal sacrifice.

Upon his arrival in the community of scholars, the general made it known immediately that he had no intention whatsoever of participating in campus social functions. Then, he went to work with a burst of energy such as had not been demonstrated on that campus in many a year.

Budget Bureau Takes "Urgent Action" To Prevent Air Force Promotion Crisis

THE Budget Bureau has revealed that at last it is giving "urgent consideration" to action which would prevent an Air Force promotion crisis.

At the Pentagon, Defense Department officials declined this week to discuss the latest developments in the drive, sparked by Secretary of the Air Force Eugene M. Zuckert and General Thomas D. White, CofS, to obtain Congressional approval for revision of the Officer Grade Limitation Act.

However, THE JOURNAL learned independently that the Defense Department sent a letter to the Budget Bureau on 19 May requesting "urgent consideration" of the Air Force officer grade structure, and that this request is being fulfilled.

Pentagon officials refused to say if the request to the Budget Bureau, was for a full-scale revision of the OGLA, as recommended by the Air Force and Bolté Committee, or whether the action was restricted to an extension beyond 30 June of temporary legislative authority for 3000 major slots in the Air Force.

Air Force leaders have stated repeatedly that unless additional spaces are provided in the major, lieutenant colonel and colonel ranks to place the Air Force on a par with the other Services, there

DR. Harold Brown, who has been at the Pentagon a month, will recommend what plane the Army will get for tactical air support.

Expand Army SecDef Is Told

In a personal appeal to Secretary of Defense McNamara, Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee has renewed his efforts to obtain more soldiers and better weapons for the Army.

He said he is "strongly" urging a build-up of Army strength to 925,000 men.

The House Chairman has disclosed that he wrote to Secretary McNamara in mid-March to plead for additional Army funds. He told the Secretary that the Army share of the military budget has been "too little for too long" and added that he is hopeful the Pentagon will correct the "serious deficiency."

President Kennedy subsequently approved an increase of 5,000 in Army strength and an additional $109 million for Army weapons, but Chairman Vinson said this can only be the "beginning" of the type of modernization required.

The full text of Chairman Vinson's 20 March letter to Secretary McNamara is classified "Secret," but it is no violation of security to report that the Chairman urged the Defense Chief to provide "meaningful improvement" in the ground forces by setting aside "additional funds for Army modernization."

Later, during House floor debate on the military procurement authorization bill, Chairman Vinson elaborated his "concern" about the Army and said he has made his views known not only to Secretary McNamara but to others at "high places in the Government."

He said the "whole matter is now under urgent study" and there is "reason to hope and believe that specific recommendations from the Executive Branch will be forthcoming in the relatively near future."

Chairman Vinson said he stands "for an Army of at least 925,000 and a greatly accelerated program of weapons modernization." The added manpower and weapons costs would total between $950 million and $1 billion, he said.

PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

President Kennedy's communication to Congress concerning the need for increased defense expenditures reached Capitol Hill just a few hours after The Journal went to press.

Next week's issue will feature a comprehensive report and analysis of the President's new action, and a related discussion of a news conference scheduled by Secretary of Defense McNamara for 26 May.

VFW CinC Scores Attacks On Chiefs

Commander-in-Chief, Ted C. Connell, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars has charged that "criticism and innuendo of the Joint Chiefs of Staff by certain faceless government officials with influence, but without responsibility, is having damaging effect on United States military leadership and prestige both at home and abroad."

Just returned from a 12-day swing through Europe, he declared: "There is little doubt that this constantly implied criticism has lessened the effectiveness of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The situation becomes more acute each day because the Joint Chiefs are unable to answer the criticism due to the confidential and responsible nature of their duties. I believe the time has come for President Kennedy to either put a stop to such talk or give the Joint Chiefs an opportunity to publicly state their case. Failure to do this can be harmful to our nation as a whole."

Commander Connell said: "I wonder if this criticism is part of a plan by certain people to attempt a breakdown in the confidence of the Joint Chiefs' system in the hope that this will ultimately lead to a single Chief of Staff: I wonder also if this criticism by faceless officials is an attempt to infringe on the responsibility of the JCS and the military leadership?"

"I urge both President Kennedy and Secretary of Defense McNamara at this time to publicly state their confidence in the Joint Chiefs of Staff. They are all dedicated and qualified military leaders, but the support of the President and Secretary of Defense is imperative if they are to be effective."

COL. CAIRNS NAMED RSI DEPUTY

COL. Douglas M. Cairns will become Deputy Director of Air University's Research Studies Institute, 1 June, it is announced by Lt. Gen. Walter E. Todd, AU Commander at Maxwell AFB, Ala. Colonel Cairns, assigned to RSI since August 1960, has been Project Officer, Doctrine Division. He succeeds Col. Ernest F. Wackwitz, jr., who will become AU's Deputy CofS for operations, replacing Col. William J. Wrigglesworth, new Maxwell Commander.

Colonel Cairns, USMA '33, in May 1954 was assigned to the JCS Joint Strategic Plans Group, and from August 1956 to June 1957 served as Chief, Subsidiary Plans Division, USAF Headquarters.

During the next three years which preceded his assignment to Maxwell AFB, Colonel Cairns was stationed at Norton AFB, Calif., as Deputy Inspector General, responsible for inspection of personnel and individual training in the USAF.

What can a skipping stone teach us about re-entry from space?

One promising approach to the problem of atmosphere re-entry is called the skip-glide path. The spaceship would follow an undulating trajectory, glancing off the atmosphere to lose its speed, much as a stone skips across the water. The necessary lift might be provided by a deployable pneumatic wing which would inflate on entering the atmosphere.

This and other approaches to aerospace deceleration are now being studied and evaluated at Northrop's Radioplane Division as part of its comprehensive program in landing and recovery systems. Long recognized as the leader in all aspects of paradyamics, Radioplane is fast becoming the industry's standard for space and aerospace landing systems. Active programs now include lunar soft landing studies, aerospace decelerators, and re-entry drag devices as well as recovery and landing systems for all manned space vehicles actively scheduled by the U.S.

Pentagon Pay Package Carries Half Billion Pricetag

cost under the new proposal is more than $1.6 billion.

In sending its report to Pentagon Manpower Chief Carlisle P. Runge, the all-Service pay-study group said the need to increase quarters allowances is more important than any of the other pay items under study. "The most overriding consideration warranting prompt corrective action," the group reported, "is that pertaining to housing of military members required to live on the civilian economy."

The task force noted that "This, of course, applies to the bulk of married personnel on active duty."

The five biggest money items in the pay package add up to more than a half billion dollars. The BAQ increases total an estimated $449,381,000; retired pay equalization amounts to $30,689,000 (for the first year and declining thereafter); trailer allowance increases total $22 million; lump-sum readjustment pay for RIF'd Reservists amounts to $8 million, and expanded use of proficiency pay totals $18.7 million.

In connection with the proposed quarters allowance boost, the pay study group has told Secretary Runge that "Congressional guidance indicates that the Services must continue to depend upon local community support for at least 45-50% of their total housing requirement," and that an even higher percentage of military families is "actually" forced to obtain private quarters.

"The present scarcity of on-base Government quarters and the practical considerations which make increased construction unlikely," the task force said, "result in substantial numbers of military families having to rely on cash allowances in lieu of public quarters."

"While the present quarters allowance has generally been increased only 14% since 1942, the nationwide Price Index for rent has risen 56.1% from 1942 to 1959. A further increase of about 37% in BAQ would have been required in order to obtain in December 1959 the same standard of housing which was obtainable in 1942 with the BAQ then authorized."

The task force noted that the quarters allowance proposal is listed as "under study" but has actually "received the coordinated support of the military departments."

Gen. Eisenhower Opposed Responsibility $50 To $150 Pay For Armed Forces Officers

THE Pentagon has revealed that President Eisenhower took a personal stand against implementation of the special "officer responsibility pay" approved by Congress in 1958.

The new pay concept, fathered by Senator John C. Stennis (D-Miss) of the Armed Services Committee, has won new backing of both the Air Force and Navy and is currently being given "further study" by the Army.

Although Air Force and Navy leaders made several efforts to win Pentagon endorsement of the plan, the Defense Department neither accepted nor rejected it under the Eisenhower Administration. The concept is now being reviewed by Secretary of Defense Mc-Namara at the request of Senator Stennis.

Details of former President Eisenhower's position on the pay plan are disclosed in the Pentagon task force study on military compensation.

The former Chief Executive, the group said, "cautioned against the use of this authority and required submission of any plans for approval prior to their implementation."

The Air Force on three occasions and the Navy on two, requested authority to implement the special $50 to $150 additional pay increments, but failed to win Pentagon backing. The last Air Force request was made last September (for implementation beginning 1 July 1961), and the last Navy request was in October of 1960. The Army said it had no desire to implement the special pay.

Defense Department arguments against the plan were summed up by former Secretary Thomas S. Gates, Jr., in a letter to Senator Stennis, dated 6 February 1960. An extract from the letter was made public by the present pay-study group. Secretary Gates said:

"We have also taken reasonable pause in this matter because of our belief in the historic concept that officers are trained for and expected to assume, increasingly heavy responsibilities in varying assignments and that present promotion systems afford those officers of demonstrated ability recurring opportunities for advancement to higher rank."

"Our preliminary review of those billets for which we would authorize responsibility pay, were it to be implemented, indicated that these same billets are the ones to which the conscientious forward-looking officer aspires in order to demonstrate his capabilities and qualifications for promotion."

During recent Senate Armed Services Committee hearings, Senator Stennis told Secretary McNamara (THE JOURNAL, 20 May) that responsibility pay could be put into effect "on a trial basis."

Secretary McNamara said he proposes to address himself to the matter. He said: "I do not believe we are using up to the limits of our authority at the moment."

Col. Cyril A. Millson has assumed duties as Transportation Officer of the Army Air Defense Command at Colorado Springs. He succeeds Col. Theodore D. Kern, USA-Ret.

Training Will Start On A3J Vigilante

Training classes for Navy pilots and maintenance crews of the North American A3J Vigilante are underway at the Naval Air Station, Sanford, Fla.

Instructors from North American Aviation's Columbus, Ohio, Division, where the A3J is produced, are being assigned to Sanford to establish and conduct training in cooperation with Navy personnel.

The Vigilantes are scheduled to begin arriving at Sanford early this summer.

PENTAGON "PARKSMANSHIP"

Put A General In The Pool

DESPITE appearances, some Pentagon colonels, Navy captains and GS-15 civilians are not "moonlighting" as taxi drivers.

Taxicabs bearing valid parking permits have been reported in parking areas reserved for people in these ranks.

A check of the Pentagon's colonel echelon S-3 parking area on 19 May turned up a cab, parked without a valid parking permit. It was "Interstate Cab Service" taxicab number 117, with the District of Columbia plates "HD 801." When first spotted at exactly 12 noon, the cab was parked in the seventh space, eastern row of Lane 2, near the Pentagon's Heliport.

The taxi bore no official sticker, although the windshield bore the marks of a once-present Pentagon parking permit holder. Under normal circumstances, such an illegally parked auto would be ticketed within an hour by General Services Administration police who patrol the area.

At 3:30 p.m. the same day the taxi was still there, unticketed—as though the owner were indeed a colonel. During the three and a half hour period, numerous tickets were given out in adjacent lanes. The following Monday and Tuesday the same cab was seen in the same parking space—unticketed. On Wednesday, 24 May, the unticketed cab was moved to the eleventh space, east row of Lane 3, slightly closer to the Pentagon entrance.

The "case of the colonel's cab" prompted a further investigation into the workings of Pentagon parking practices. The results of the investigation can be summarized under two main heads: The Rules According to Hoyle; and How To Beat The Game.

The investigation revealed how parking "leaks" occur at the Pentagon, how almost anyone down to the GS-4 level legally may obtain Mall and River Entrance parking—reserved for general officers and equivalent civilians—and how to "manipulate" parking stickers to get a choicer spot.

PARKING ACCORDING TO HOYLE

PENTAGON parking rules, as explained in the official regulations, are essentially very simple. The spaces are allotted according to rank or equivalent civilian grade, and sometimes according to need.

Prime parking spaces at the Mall Entrance, River Entrance and GSR area in South Parking are reserved for general officers and GS-15 civilians and above. They are highly prized because of their proximity to the building's entrances.

Colonels and equivalent ranking civilians are issued S-3 stickers, which permit them to hunt for a space in the next best parking areas of South Parking. It is seldom more than one block's walk from the farthest S-3 spaces to the Pentagon entrance.

Army captains, majors and lieutenant colonels, other equivalent military members and civilians between the grades of GS-11 and GS-13, are authorized S-2 spaces in South Parking and N-2 spaces in North Parking, which require a little more leg work to get to the office.

For those in lower grades and some newcomers to the Nation's biggest office building, WN spaces are reserved "way down the road" in North Parking.

Permits for each of the parking areas are distributed yearly on the basis of the number of personnel in each rank in the Defense Department staff and each of the Services.

The officials who execute this distribution are: Mr. Ronnie Dean for the Defense Department; Col. Ralph Smith, Pentagon Commandant, for the Army; Mr. Sam Goode for the Navy; and Mr. Marvin J. Erlendson for the Air Force.

Car pools are encouraged. When a car pool is employed, the parking area used can be the one to which its highest ranking member is entitled. This puts a premium on including colonels and general officers among the passengers.

Special arrangements for parking are made for disabled personnel, who may be given any special parking spaces necessary.

Distribution of the parking permits, once the initial allocations are made, is left to each of the Services, which are legally free to distribute them "according to Hoyle," or make adjustments on occasion. Adjustments made for secretaries who must work extra-long night hours in sensitive offices, are generally looked upon with favor.

Other adjustments, such as allotting personnel spaces to which they are not entitled by rank, are perfectly legal, but are frowned upon by senior parking officials.

Once parking stickers are issued newcomers must obtain permits for their appropriate parking areas as vacancies occur. Until spaces are available, newcomers will be authorized far-distant parking in the WN area.

There has been one recent case of an Army colonel being relegated to the WN "boondocks" for three months because of a lack of vacancies in his authorized parking area.

HOW TO BEAT THE GAME

THE following rules, legal and illegal, have been compiled from the "sharper" parking practices actually employed at the Pentagon and related to THE Journal by senior parking officials:

- Find a general officer or equivalent civilian who does not use a parking space. Ask him to sign you up in his mythical car pool. This will entitle you to legal parking in the Mall, River or GSR spaces. The same procedure may be used with colonels for other privileged spaces. This practice is frowned upon, but is entirely within the legal rules of "Pentagon Parksmanship."

- Steal a valid permit for the S-3 section of South Parking. The chances against discovery on any given day are about 100 to one, but if you get caught you will be fined $50 and be deprived of Pentagon parking privileges. Although permits are "lost or stolen" on an average of 15 a week, use of a stolen permit is not recommended for those who want to stay out of trouble.

- Forge a permit. Since the new parking permits, which became effective this month, are black on white, forging them should be relatively simple. The last known case of permit forging occurred in March. A permit forger is subject to at least the same risk as a permit stealer.

- A special trick is reserved for persons holding S-2 permits. By attaching their permit to the car's sun visor with a large paper clip covering the bottom of the number 2, the permits could easily be mistaken for more privileged S-3 authorizations. This method is illegal, but often tried.

- Fake injury or disability to get a privileged position. This is looked upon as a very unhealthy practice.

- Have a friend fake loss of his permit and, when a duplicate is issued, use the old one on your car. The penalty is the same as for stealing a permit. And, if caught, your friend will lose his parking privileges, too.

- Park anywhere without a permit. This method costs a $3 fine the first time and progressively more for repeaters.

Pentagon parking officials, commenting on these abuses, say they are trying their best to keep violations to a minimum, but lack the money and personnel to curb all possible violations of the "parksmanship" game.

Retired Officers Will Permit "Up To Six" Directors From Non-Washington Areas

THE Board of Directors of the Retired Officers Association has voted to provide that "up to six" of its authorized 34 directors will be elected from areas where there are "heavy concentrations" of members.

The action was taken as the result of the report of an 11-man committee headed by Lt. Gen. Homer L. Litzenberg, USMC-Ret. The committee was appointed by former President, Lt. Gen. Idwal H. Edwards, USAF-Ret., as the result of a resolution adopted at the November 15th Biennial Convention, reported exclusively in the 3 Dec. issue of THE JOURNAL "to study the question of regional representation on the Board of Directors and to evolve a proposed plan for expansion in the present regional representation on said Board." (Retired Activities, Page 17)

At the same time, the Association announced the resignation of General Edwards as President. General Litzenberg moved up from First Vice President to President. General Edwards has left for a visit to Europe.

The report of the Litzenberg Committee recommended that the Board be expanded to 46 members and that the additional 12 members be required to be elected from areas outside the immediate vicinity of Washington, D. C. The Board, however, felt that the expansion was not necessary and that six members from areas away from Washington were all that was required.

The November convention was enlivened by an aggressive group whose avowed purpose was to make the Association "more democratic and representative of the views of the membership."

In addition to the resolution requiring the study of regional representation, the insurgent group also brought about the adoption of a resolution providing that when proxies are mailed out in advance by the Association information be included as to the slate of nominations and the resolutions and other matters of major importance to be voted on at the convention.

Leaders in the movement included Col. William Hones, USA-Ret., of Matthews, Va.; Maj. Gen. Patrick H. Tansey, USA-Ret., of Arlington, Va.; Maj. Gen. Stanley L. Scott, USA-Ret., of Alexandria, Va., and Maj. Gen. George J. Richards of Pennsylvania. General Scott was elected to the Board of Directors at the November convention.

The Board made no announcement as to what would be the six areas of "heavy concentration" from which the new Directors would be elected. It is interesting to note, however, that the statement issued at the convention by the insurgent group said that their objectives had the full support of the following six organizations:

Peninsula Retired Officers of California, San Antonio Retired Officers Club, Virginia Retired Officers Association, Santa Monica Bay Area Officers Club of California, Louisiana-Texas Retired Officers Association of Shreveport, La., and Anniston, Ala., Retired Officers Club.

The Board also announced that it had decided to enlarge the executive committee by including the Executive Vice President as a member. Capt. Franz O. Willenbacher, USN-Ret., is the present Executive Vice President.

Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, USN-Ret., Second Vice President, was moved up to first vice president to fill the vacancy created by General Litzenberg's elevation, and VADM. Lloyd T. Chalker, USCG-Ret., was elected second vice president.

If you had to— could you afford to replace your personal property at today's costs?

If you took an inventory of all the personal and household goods you own, you would probably be amazed at the large sum you have invested. And most of the things that you own would probably cost a great deal more than when you bought them. Since this property represents so great a share of your worth, it deserves to be adequately protected from damage and loss.

The USAA WORLD WIDE HOUSEHOLD GOODS & PERSONAL EFFECTS FLOATER covers personal property owned by you, your wife and dependents. There are no restrictions as to geographical location... your premium remains the same— regardless of where or how often you move— anywhere in the world.

As an officer of the US Armed Forces*, you need the coverage offered by USAA's World Wide Floater. The protection of your possessions continues during their shipment and at whatever location they may be stored or shipped.

The cost is so low—you cannot afford to be without this insurance. Like other USAA policies the cost has always been reduced at year end by a liberal dividend.

For further information on this valuable policy, fill in the coupon below, ordering your insurance today, or write for literature further describing the policy.

*Membership in United Services Automobile Association is limited to active and retired Regular officers, midshipmen, cadets and warrant officers of the United States Army, Air Force, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Public Health Service, Coast and Geodetic Survey; Foreign Service Officers of the Department of State; Reserve and National Guard officers when ordered to extended active Federal duty for a period of six months or longer; the widows of such officers and warrant officers so long as their status is not changed by remarriage. Reserve and National Guard officers who retire, or who are released to inactive status and retain their commissions or warrants, may continue their insurance or renew their insurance with the Association at any time, provided membership in USAA was established while such officers were on extended active duty.

Is Pentagon Destroying Military Prestige?

The present civilian administrators of the Department of Defense are fast reaching a critical point in their relationship with the Armed Services. The morale of the career officers of all the Services is in grave danger because of Pentagon failure to back up the military leadership against the demand of Senator Albert Gore (D-Tenn.) that all members of the JCS be replaced by "new, wiser, and abler men," and the continual, and not effectively denied, reports that short shrift is being given to the advice of the military leaders.

Deterioration in the relationship between the civilian and military chiefs has now become a matter of public as well as Service concern. The tendency of the Pentagon administrators to look over the heads of the military when they are reaching important decisions, formerly only a subject of discussion in military circles, has now become a topic of Congressional and nation-wide discussion. As revealed on the first page of this issue of THE JOURNAL, Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee, is "alarmed" over the reports of the by-passing of military leaders and the Service Secretaries in policy matters. One has only to read the article, "Top Brass Vs. 'Whiz Kids'—The Crucial Conflict Over Pentagon Policy" as written by Pentagon reporter Lloyd Norman in the current issue of Newsweek magazine to learn the unhappy situation as viewed by a long-time, skilled military observer. Recently, too, Mark S. Watson, Pulitzer prize winning Military Editor of the Baltimore Sun, deplored the down-grading of the Services in his article "Voice of Military Is Small in Crises," which was reprinted in the 6 May issue of THE JOURNAL.

There is a great and valuable pool of intellect and management skill in the present Pentagon civilian administration. But they must learn that military experience and training are indispensable to efficient and effective defense forces and that the advice of war-proven leaders must be sought and carefully weighed if sound conclusions are to be reached. They must learn, too, that morale is the most vital factor in military effectiveness and that it can not be maintained by down-grading the Service leadership in the eyes of Congress and the public.

There is one bright spot in the picture—the selection of General Curtis E. LeMay to be Chief of Staff of the Air Force. All of the Services know General LeMay as an effective, efficient leader who will pull no punches to make and keep his forces combat-ready. They know also that while he is blunt, outspoken and uncompromising with his subordinates, he will fight to the bitter end for their rights and welfare and to keep their morale high.

We hope Secretary of Defense McNamara will take steps to assure the public and the Services of his faith in and regard for the men in uniform and his determination that their advice will be sought and carefully weighed in future military decisions.

Cemeteries Overseas Dedicated For Memorial Day

The second phase of the great task to which the late General of the Armies John J. Pershing devoted the later years of his life has been completed with the dedication of all the World War II overseas cemeteries. This work has been done by the American Battle Monuments Commission, created in 1923 with General Pershing as Chairman. Following the death of General Pershing in 1948, General of the Army George C. Marshall succeeded him, until his death in 1959, when General Jacob L. Devers became Chairman, which post he still holds.

The dignity and beauty of the settings of these cemeteries and their memorials form a great tribute to the brave dead enshrined there. As General Devers tells in his article on the next page of this issue, great love, care, and skill has gone into making these a fitting expression of the nation's gratitude. U. S. visitors abroad will be proud of the work of their government and its American Battle Monuments Commission.

A Salute To the Air Rescue Service On Its 15th Birthday

MATS' Air Rescue Service celebrates its fifteenth anniversary on 29 May. A combat organization that saved the lives of 9,680 fighting men in Korea—996 of them from behind enemy lines—it also has a brilliant peacetime record during which it has found and rescued from certain death more than 8,088 persons, aided a confirmed total of more than 51,290 and saved at least 80 aircraft from destruction.

Not only has the Air Rescue Service been a boon to our own people but its world-wide activities have won friends in the many nations where it has performed life-saving work in disasters, such nations as the Netherlands, England, Bolivia, Japan, Italy, Mexico, and Costa Rica.

From its headquarters at Orlando, Fla., where it is currently commanded by Brig. Gen. Joseph A. Cunningham, the Air Rescue Service has been given the responsibility for National Search and Rescue, coordinating all such activity within the United States. In a few months the Service will include the Air Force wide local base rescue program in its organization, involving approximately 140 helicopters at 69 bases around the world, 49 within the U.S.

The nation is proud of this fine Service which saves lives in war and peace.

Army Efficiency Report

■ Congratulations to the Army for its new officer Efficiency Report form with its built-in guidance.

Only one thing remains to be done—keep record of all ratings given by each rating officer. Although it appears that the ideal average for the overall performance would be about 60, the actual average ratings will vary with each rating officer. An unusually high or low rating would then take on an added significance if the actual average rating given, by this rating officer, were known.

It will be so easy if we start now.

Put Medical School In Texas

■ There is a bill pending in Congress to set up an Armed Forces Medical Academy to be located in the Washington, D. C., area. This Academy is to be named "THE ARMED FORCES MEDICAL, DENTAL AND ALLIED SCIENCE ACADEMY."

My contemporaries and I strongly support the urgent need for such a Medical Academy, in view of the great difficulty the various Military Services are now experiencing in securing physicians, dentists, nurses, and allied scientists. Also, there is an acute shortage of doctors and nurses in the United States.

We believe that San Antonio, Tex., is the most logical and economical location for this Medical Academy, for the following reasons:

1. Brooke Army Medical Center, consisting of the Army Medical Service School and Brooke General Hospital, where a splendid teaching and research program is in operation, is located at Ft. Sam Houston.

2. The Aerospace Medical Center, with its School of Aviation Medicine, is situated at Brooks Field, where the unused portion of about 1200 acres of land could be used for the Medical Academy without any additional land cost to the Government.

3. The 1000-bed USAF Hospital, which is a teaching and research hospital, is located at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio.

4. I have contacted most of the senior retired Army and Air Force Medical Officers residing in San Antonio. They heartily endorse the establishment of the Medical Academy in San Antonio. Further, they strongly recommend that a Nursing School be included in the Bill. The majority of the Army and Air Force officers of the Medical Department, when retired, reside in San Antonio. These officers constitute a large reservoir of the best Medico-Military talent in the world. Their services, when needed, would be available to the Medical Academy.

5. Action is now being taken to secure a branch of The University of Texas Medical School to be located in San Antonio, which will also be available to render assistance in any way possible.

In conclusion, we do not believe congested Washington, D. C., where land cost is astronomical, or any other area, offers better facilities, climate, economy in construction and operation, than San Antonio.

Therefore, I sincerely trust you will lend your support to this worthy cause for the benefit of both the military and civilian population, who so urgently need more training facilities and additional physicians, dentists, nurses, and allied scientists for our expanding population.

According to most economists, by the end of 1970 the United States will have an increase in population of approximately 30,000,000, and San Antonio is supposed to reach the 1,000,000 population mark. Now is the time to advance our planning.

Disabled Serve Without Pay; Navy Builds Guantanamo; General Sherman Heads For Atlanta, With Few Losses

10 Years Ago—In recent House appropriations hearings, it was brought out that a number of men retired for physical disability had been recalled to active duty and served with the Armed Forces for several months without pay. The men had refused to waive their disability retirement pay from the Veterans Administration and consequently could not be paid by the Services. The V.A. also refused to make payments to the men since they had been recalled to active duty, and they therefore went payless.

50 Years Ago—Work will shortly be started on the Navy oil station at Guantanamo. The Navy now has oil storehouses at Bradford, R. I., Norfolk, Charleston, Key West, and with Guantanamo the entire Atlantic coast will be covered.

97 Years Ago—From the account of General Sherman's movements which we publish this week, it will be seen that he has accomplished more than half the distance between Chattanooga and Atlanta with comparatively trifling losses thus far, our total casualties amounting to about 5,000.

Battle Monuments Commission Preserves Memory Of U.S. War Dead In Overseas Cemeteries

BY GENERAL JACOB L. DEVERS,
USA-RET.
Chairman, American Battle Monuments
Commission

NOT only on Memorial Day but every day in the year we cherish the memory of our gallant war dead. Not only as individuals but as a nation we mourn the loss of loved ones and we pay lasting tribute as best we know how to those whose sacrifice for us was supreme.

Gen. Devers

The American Battle Monuments Commission, established in 1923, has accomplished for our nation, bereaved of thousands of her men, that which as individuals we could never have done. It has constructed and maintained military cemeteries and memorials for Americans who fell on foreign soil, as well as one monument in New York and one in San Francisco for those who were lost enroute to foreign duty.

To visit any one of these memorials—in the Philippines, in Europe, or in Africa—is to realize the extent of a nation's gratitude and the depths of an individual's emotion—for these realizations are portrayed and conveyed by the memorials with steadfast, beautiful, dignified, mute eloquence.

When the wife, parent, child, or comrade of a man visits his resting place marked by the white marble cross on which is the symbol of his particular faith—in the midst of the best that American artistry, architecture and landscaping can effect—there cannot but be a deepening sense of peace, a nearer approach to reconciliation, a greater comfort, a quiet pride.

WWI Memorial Chapels

In the early days of its existence, after World War I, the Commission erected a memorial chapel in each of the eight military cemeteries already established in Europe by the War Department, at:

Aisne-Marne, Belleau, France
Brookwood, England
Flanders Field, Waregem, Belgium
Meuse-Argonne, Romagne, France
Oise-Aisne, Fère-en-Tardenois, France
St. Mihiel, Thiaucourt, France
Somme, Bony, France
Suresnes, France

Eleven monuments were also erected at that time—eight on American battlefields; one at Brest, France; one at Gibraltar, important in the operations of the United States Navy; and one in Tours, France, the city where the Headquarters of the Services of Supply of the American Expeditionary Forces was located. In those days of the Commission's activity, it is interesting to recall that working as a member of the Commission's staff was Maj. Dwight D. Eisenhower, USA.

By the end of World II, several hundred temporary cemeteries had been established. With great care 14 sites in foreign countries were selected as permanent cemeteries, and all others were vacated. These fourteen are now under the jurisdiction of the Commission. The locations, which reflect the progress of military operations in World War II are:

Ardennes, Neuville-en-Condroy, Belgium
Brittany, St. James, France
Cambridge, England
Epinal, France
Florence, Italy
Henri-Chapelle, Belgium
Lorraine, St. Avoird, France
Luxembourg
Manila, Philippines
Netherlands, Margraten, Holland
Normandy, St. Laurent, France
North Africa, Carthage, Tunisia

Rhone, Draguignan, France
Sicily-Rome, Nettuno, Italy

14 American Architects

In 1947 the Commission selected 14 outstanding American architects, each to design one of the cemeteries, conceiving the graves plots and a monument as complementary elements of an integral memorial to the services and sacrifices of the American armed forces who fought in the respective regions. With each architect an American landscape architect, an American sculptor and an American muralist or painter ordinarily collaborated. The construction of the cemeteries and memorials, as well as most of the works of art, was effected by local contractors and artists under the supervision of the Commission, which has offices in Paris, Rome, Manila, and Honolulu for that purpose.

Although no two memorials are alike in design, each embodies three essential elements: a small devotional chapel, a list of the Mission in that region, and maps of permanent materials, with inscriptions in English and in the language of the country, to record the achievements of our soldiers, sailors, marines, and airmen.

CAVALRY MEMORIAL

A life-size statue of a Cavalryman and his horse constructed as a memorial to the U. S. Cavalry will be unveiled at Ft. Riley, Kans., on 14 June at 2:30 p.m.

The ceremony, filled with pagantry and color, will be the highlight of the Ft. Riley-Junction City observance of the Kansas Centennial Year. It will also be held in conjunction with the Army's Birthday and the Organization Day of the 1st Infantry Division, now stationed at the Post.

The statue, built by soldier sculptors and inspired by Frederick Remington's painting, "The Cavalryman," has been under construction for about one year as a joint Ft. Riley-Junction City project.

These have been extremely well done. In no two cases is the method—or even the materials—the same; the maps may be of layered marbles, or in fresco, perhaps in bronze relief, or in ceramics, or engraved in stone. The number of maps varies according to the historical information to be presented. The operations in the vicinity of the memorial itself are usually depicted, together with other pertinent operations in the region—and an overall map of the theater. In the Manila Memorial there are 25 maps recalling the achievements of American armed forces in the Pacific, in China, India, and in Burma. At Neuville in Belgium two of the maps depict operations of our forces while the third commemorates the Services of Supply in the European Theater; here, also, carved marble panels, with background gold-leafed, portray various activities of combat and supply troops; both maps and panels are brought into sharp relief by special direct lighting. All of the maps and inscriptions at each memorial have been submitted for approval to the Historical Divisions of the Armed Services before being installed at the memorials.

"Key Maps" Aid Visitors

Another feature of interest at each memorial is the two sets of "Key Maps"—"The War Against Germany" and "The War Against Japan." Each set consists of three maps, each of which covers about one-third of the period of our participation in the war. By these Key Maps each major battle may be related to all others in time and space. Thus a visitor to a memorial in Europe can visually compare the events in Europe with those occurring simultaneously elsewhere in Europe or even in the Pacific.

The 93,158 Dead who rest in these World War II cemeteries are approximately 39% of those originally buried overseas, 61% having been returned home at the request of the next-of-kin. In addition, the names of 55,851 of the Missing are inscribed on the walls of the Memorials. These inscriptions memorialize those whose remains were never recovered or identified, or were buried at sea.

The memorials in New York and San Francisco commemorate those who lost their lives in the American coastal waters of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. The names of 4,596 Missing are inscribed in the New York Memorial, and 412 at San Francisco. In Hawaii at the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific, which is under the jurisdiction of the Memorial Division of the Quartermaster General's office, the Commission is erecting a memorial which records the names of 18,091 Missing of World War II and 8,187 Missing in the Korean conflict. It will contain 15 maps depicting the war in the Pacific, together with appropriate inscriptions.

All Headstones From Italy

Each of the graves overseas in both World War I and World War II cemeteries is marked by a headstone of white marble—a Star of David for those of Jewish faith, a Latin cross for all others. The headstones for the 14 World War II cemeteries were quarried and fabricated for the Commission in the Italian Tyrol, northwest of Venice, except about one-half of those in the Philippine cemetery, which came from the region of Carrara in Western Italy, as did all of those of the World War I cemeteries. Each headstone bears the name of the deceased, his rank, service number, organization, date of death, and State or Territory from which he entered the military service.

The first chairman of the American Battle Monuments Commission was General John J. Pershing. When General Pershing died in 1948, General George C. Marshall was elected to succeed him and held the Chairmanship until his death in 1959. The present membership of the Commission is:

Jacob L. Devers, Chairman
Thomas C. Kinkaid, Vice Chairman
Leslie L. Biddle, Carl Spaatz
Alexander A. Vandegrift, Benjamin O. Davis
John Phillips, Forest A. Harness
Charles E. Potter, Edward F. McGinnis
Mrs. Wendell L. Thomas North, Secretary
Willkie

The Commissioners, who serve without pay, are appointed by the President.

Million Visitors In Year

The cemeteries are open from 8 a.m. to sundown; visitors are always welcome. During the past year more than a million names were registered in the guest books which are kept in the comfortable and adequate guest-rest houses at each site. The Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents stationed at each cemetery are American veterans. They furnish information, aid in locating graves and, in every way possible, provide assistance to visitors and especially to next-of-kin and to veterans.

The American Battle Monuments Commission is not responsible for construction, maintenance, operation, or information concerning cemeteries in the United States or its territories and possessions.

Orders for flowers for all overseas cemeteries may be placed through any local florist who is a member of the "Florists Telegraph Delivery Association." In addition to the name of the deceased, his rank, service number, the name of the cemetery, the nearest city, and the country in which it is located should be provided.

Upon request, the Commission will furnish, without charge, to the next-of-kin, an aerial colored lithograph of the appropriate cemetery and memorial, and will endeavor to be of assistance in any way possible for it to do so.

It is the earnest purpose of the Commission so to design these cemeteries and memorials that they shall be a perpetual and worthy tribute by our Nation to those who gave their lives in her service.

MEMO--

THE LAW IS BEING BROKEN each time an Assistant Secretary of Defense or one of his Deputies gives an order to someone in the Services without written authority from Secretary of Defense McNamara and without going through a Service Secretary or his designee. This procedure is required by the Defense Reorganization Act of 1958 (see Page 1).

THERE ARE RECURRING REPORTS—that not officially denied—that civilian subordinates in Secretary McNamara's office are studying a plan which would provide for an "internal reorganization" at the Pentagon. The proposal would arm Assistant Secretaries, Deputy Assistant Secretaries, and other civilian officials with authority to deal directly with people in the Services. To expedite tasks, the plan would permit direct action, bypassing the Service Secretaries and, the Service Chiefs, as might be necessary. Similarly, the proposal would permit direct contacts with members of the Joint Staff.

IT IS NOT POSSIBLE to report details of the controversial study, or to assess its chances of final approval. This is because of Pentagon information ground rules which stipulate that matters still in the discussion stage are to be withheld from newsmen. One conclusion is certain: if efforts are made to implement the proposal, there will be loud protests from the Service Secretaries and even louder reverberations on Capitol Hill.

THE MILITARY PAY TASK FORCE REPORT (see Page 1), although not classified, is being withheld from newsmen by the Defense Department for "policy" reasons. The revised Bolté Report, also unclassified, is in a similar status. The Reserve Forces Report was also still being withheld this week; it carries a "Top Secret" classification.

THE NATIONAL GUARD ASSOCIATION has been holding its public fire concerning Pentagon secrecy on the Reserve Forces, but the politically powerful Association is telling its members that "this is a strange and unusual period in the history of the National Guard." The Association says that "all efforts to find out what these studies cover or are to cover, what information has been or is sought or developed, thus far have bumped into a blank wall of silence." The Association reports to its members: "Disturbing, too, is the growing dominance in military policy-making of the Budget Bureau, and of brilliant scientific and fiscal experts high in defense councils, versus the troop leaders who will have to execute decisions developed by men who never have lived through the hard school of combat or command."

IT'S DIFFICULT TO UNDERSTAND why the Services could not come up with a solid recommendation to Secretary McNamara regarding the type of aircraft to be used for close support of Army forces (see Page 1). As it stands now, the Air Force has proposed the F-105. The Navy advocates the A4D. The Army, for whom the aircraft will be obtained, declines to state a preference, although the majority of the General Staff backs the A4D. So it will be up to Dr. Harold Brown, new DoD Director of R&E to make a recommendation to Secretary McNamara.

THE NEW AIR FORCE VICE CofS, General Frederic H. Smith, jr., who will succeed CofS-designate General Curtis E. LeMay (The Journal 13 May) has tri-Service loyalties. General Smith is the son of the late Maj. Gen. Smith, who commanded the VII Corps of the Third Army in WWII. The new Vice CofS, who will leave his assignment as CinC of U. S. Air Forces Europe, was born at Ft. Monroe, Va., 30 June 1908 and was graduated from West Point in '29. He is married to the former Martha King, daughter of the late Fleet Admiral Ernest King.

GETTING IN HOT WATER is going to be costly at the Pentagon. New price lists in cafeterias prescribe a 5 cent service charge for a container of hot water. The cost of rhubarb is also on the rise—from 7 to 10 cents in cafeterias and from 10 to 15 cents in dining rooms.

IF UNANIMITY IS NOT ACHIEVED on all future JCS position papers, it can be expected that the positions of the individual Chiefs will be hidden. Secretary McNamara has told Congress that when specific JCS members "are identified as having presented particular opinions" it "causes concern in the Department." Asked about the JCS views on procurement of the Nike Zeus anti-missile-missile, Secretary McNamara told House Military Appropriations Subcommittee members he would like to give the pros and cons of the Zeus problem without "identifying the views of the particular parties at issue."

IN SUBSEQUENT TESTIMONY, General Thomas D. White, Air Force CofS, told the Committee he thinks that "to embark on a very great Nike Zeus program would be a waste of money." General White said it would cost "nearly $14 billion" to complete the proposed program.

SECRETARY MCNAMARA, in recent Senate hearings, deplored public discussion of the deficiencies of the Nike Zeus with the comment that "what we ought to be saying is that we have the most perfect anti-ICBM system that the human mind will ever devise." During the House hearings, the Secretary was asked if he has no confidence in the "reliability" of the Zeus. "That is correct," he said. He subsequently told the Committee, that "every effort has been and will continue to be made to expedite the development of Zeus in every way."

AN AIR STAFF REORGANIZATION shortly will be approved by Secretary of the Air Force Eugene M. Zuckert and Secretary of Defense McNamara. It follows the recent reorganization of the Air Research and Development Command to the Air Force Systems Command and the Air Materiel Command to the Air Force Logistics Command. In that shift, AFSC under Lt. Gen. Bernard A. Schriever assumed considerable responsibilities previously under AFLC, headed by General Samuel E. Anderson.

THE NEW AF CHANGES will see the Deputy CofS for Materiel, Lt. Gen. Mark E. Bradley, jr., redesignated as the Deputy CofS for Systems and Logistics. There will be an assistant deputy for each of these two tasks. The Deputy CofS, Development, Lt. Gen. Roscoe C. Wilson, will be given a new title, possibly Deputy CofS for Research and Technology, or Research and Test. There will be no name changes for the other 4 Deputy Chiefs of Staff. The Systems and Logistics office will assume many duties formerly under the Deputy for Development. An interesting switch: in the field, the AF Reorganization gives increased responsibilities to the R&D people in comparison with Logistics. At the Pentagon, it's the opposite emphasis.

AS AN ALTERNATIVE to the B-70, Secretary McNamara has told Congress the Pentagon is considering "a type of aircraft which might be thought of as a mobile launching platform for certain types of missiles." He said it would be a "standoff launcher, if you will, that could be maintained in the air for long periods of time and which, therefore, did not run the risk of being destroyed on the ground, but which did not penetrate the airspace over the target in the way that the B-70 would have to penetrate, and which was not subject to the risk of air defense losses that the B-70 is subject to." There are a number of Air Force officers, and those in other Services also, who are concerned that too much stress is being placed on the "standoff" requirement. These officers say, in private conversations, that there is a tendency by some new Pentagon civilian planners to avoid the so-called "bloody nose" approach to military operations.

SMALL CAR DRIVERS AT THE PENTAGON are on the increase. New surveys show that 17% of the automobiles parked around the Pentagon are foreign made, 9% are U. S.-made compacts and the remainder are U. S. standard models. This summer, Pentagon officials hope to set aside special parking areas exclusively for the small cars. A plan to establish a parking permit office in the building's main corridor to issue all parking permits for civilian and military personnel is also under study. Such an office would ensure that newly-arrived personnel get their correct parking assignment as soon as they report. Under the present system (see page 6) some senior officers must wait months before they receive a space in accordance with their rank.

OVER 21,000 PARKING PERMITS ARE IN FORCE at the Pentagon, but there are only 9,317 spaces available in parking areas. In figuring the number of spaces needed at any one time, parking officials have worked up formulas for the number of people who are ill, on TDY, leave or are elsewhere in the city on an average day. The figures assume that about 30% of all personnel will be away at any one time.

PRIME PENTAGON PARKING—equal or better than that reserved for generals and admirals—has been set aside at the building's South Loading Ramp for GSA Public Building Service employees. They have 61 spaces, drawn by lot each year, plus 20 additional spaces in North and South Parking. GSA owns the building. The Defense Department rents its headquarters from GSA.

DESK-BOUND MARINES WILL BE PLEASED at the easing of Physical Readiness Tests by Headquarters. In the 20-foot rope climb test, 30 seconds will be allowed for the ascent with no time limit called on the descent. Previously, the total was 30 seconds for the round trip. The Evacuation Test, in which a Marine runs 50 yards to pick up a casualty and return, has been altered to allow the casualty to assist in the pick-up.

ALTHOUGH THE ARMY OFFICIALLY SAYS no date has been set for convening the brigadier general selection board, it is reliably reported that the board will convene 26 June for a duration of 14 days. Board members will include Lieutenant Generals Paul D. Adams and Robert J. Wood and Maj. Gen. August Schomburg.

NEW LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR of the Panama Canal Zone will be Col. Walter P. Leber, who has been Executive Officer to the Army Chief of Engineers. He will succeed Pentagon-bound Col. John D. McElheny late next month.

RADM. JAMES W. BOUNDY is serving as Special Assistant to Secretary of the Navy John B. Connally, jr. RADM. John W. Crumpacker succeeds Admiral Boundy as Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts and Paymaster General. Admiral Crumpacker has been Director, Material and Budget Division, Naval Operations.

THE ARMY'S HIGHEST RANKING AVIATOR, General Herbert B. Powell, CONARC CG, is not on flying status. Recent efforts to put him back in the cockpit—based on the fact that a first-hand knowledge of Army Aviation is necessary in his present billet—have failed to win approval of the Army Staff.

MAJ. GEN. JAMES F. CANTWELL, New Jersey CofS, has been re-elected President of the Adjutants General Association of the United States. Other officers re-elected are Maj. Gen. Heber L. Edwards, North Dakota, Vice President, and Maj. Gen. E. W. Heywood, Maine, Secretary and Treasurer. Elected to the executive committee are Major Generals Ronald D. McDonald, Michigan, Van D. Nunally, jr., Tennessee, and Maj. Gen. Roy W. Kenny.

TRAFFIC MANAGEMENT AGENCY REORGANIZED

MAJ. GEN. I. Sewell Morris, Executive Director of the Military Traffic Management Agency, has announced organizational changes at his Headquarters in Washington.

He said the changes are designed to accomplish four major objectives: (1) simplify internal staff and command lines of responsibility; (2) focus greater emphasis upon the functional areas of increased MTMA responsibilities; (3) realign functions in support of Department of Defense commodity single manager operating agencies, and (4) centralize the coordination of Agency advances in automating its traffic management support of the increasingly mechanized supply and logistics systems of the Military Services.

The revised MTMA Headquarters has four directorates instead of three. In the new organization, the Directorate of Administration and Services is headed by Mr. Roland L. Guyotte, jr., former Special Assistant to General Morris. The Directorate of Policy and Plans is under Col. Richard M. Ludlow, USAF. The Directorate of Freight Traffic is directed by Capt. Harry W. Leiser, USN, and the Directorate of Passenger Traffic is headed by Capt. C. V. Johnson, USN.

SPACE LUBRICANTS

Such gases as nitrogen, helium, argon and carbon tetrafluoride are being investigated for the Air Force Systems Command as a possible lubrication for bearings to be used in very high temperature aerospace work.

While conventional lubricants such as grease or oil are usable only in temperatures below 800 degrees F., in an experiment conducted last February a single gas bearing was operated throughout the temperature range from 75 degrees F. to 1,500 degrees F. at speeds up to 65,000 rpm.

The scholars watched with interest and anxiety. They recalled that the general, during his military career, had taken a year's graduate training at a civilian university and, during a period of peace, had been an instructor at a top service school for three years. The scholars became anxious when the new president began to assemble his staff.

The first appointment was that of a retired lieutenant general—he was only four years older than the president—as administrative assistant. The president reasoned that since the lieutenant general had been responsible for expenditure of billions of dollars during his career and had written numerous briefings for Congress on this subject, he would be able to handle the complex financial problems of the university and placate the regents or overseers with little difficulty.

The academicians, talking this appointment over in their club, concluded that the new president, on the basis of his notable record, certainly must know what he is doing when it comes to problems of logistics. They reasoned that with such effective direction, it might be possible at last to obtain approval from the regents for more faculty positions and higher pay scales.

But anxiety quickly grew to alarm when the president decided that the retired lieutenant general also would conduct a special "crash" study concerning the need for a complete revision of the curriculum. The president said he wanted a report within two months.

The president decided that he would maintain the office of chancellor, but would assign many of his responsibilities to a new chief academic officer, who would also be able to fill a collateral post as university counsel. A retired Marine Corps major general was named for this position.

As the weeks went by, the president worked devotedly from early in the morning until very late at night on the multifarious problems which go with such an office. New job descriptions were formulated for the janitorial staff. The pension and retirement fund was made the subject of an urgent study. The president's office was a very busy place, indeed.

One professor was overheard at lunch asking a colleague if he thought the president ever would be able to find time in such a busy schedule to visit a classroom, but the topic was not pursued. The conversation turned quickly to a discussion of the president's latest project. It concerned establishment of a task force—to be directed by the chief academic officer—to examine the need for revision of university promotion policies.

The campus newspaper took note of the fact that many retired military officers were being summoned to assume academic duties. The newspaper expressed editorial indignation when it learned exclusively that many of the new campus leaders did not own a button-down shirt. The allegation was made that some of them even used a strange kind of metal device with two pointed ends to keep their collars stiff.

The newspaper revealed one day that two professors had been denied immediate clearance for articles that were intended for publication in professional journals. One article discussed the problem: "Should There Be A Central Intelligence File on Campus Pay Scales?". The other carried the title: "Why the Pentagon Needs More Consultants." The general was said to be particularly concerned about the potential impact of the second article.

The publication difficulties of the scholars were viewed by many people as being a problem, but actually a minor one. These people, some of whom knew what they were talking about, raised a series of questions about what was going on at the university.

One poet-type individual remarked that all the ivy on the administration building had not grown in a single year. He suggested that someone might want to remind the energetic and dedicated new president that the university had been in operation for some years and, hopefully, would continue for many, many more years into the future.

There was another fellow—he was an associate professor—who questioned the qualifications of a former Strategic Air Command wing commander, now the Dean of the Graduate School, to set high academic policy. The associate professor was told that the new Dean had published a series of articles on "Education and Survival in the Nuclear Age" between bombing missions.

Then it happened. After weeks of silence, one of the professors who held an endowed chair decided to speak. This is what he said:

"Our university and our great Nation face a period of great danger. There are mighty forces abroad whose aim it is to destroy our campus and our country.

"How can we at this university meet the challenge of our times? The answer is not an easy one. But let me make this brief suggestion.

"The time has come for our president to take whatever action is necessary to achieve the closest possible understanding and cooperation among the career scholars and our new military men superiors. We serve the same campus team.

"The time also has come for our president and his staff to visit us in the classroom, to seek our experienced counsel, and thereby demonstrate that we are serving together.

"If this is not done, it is my professional responsibility to warn that academic morale will be shattered, and classroom effectiveness will suffer."

Army Plans $200 Million Copter Buy; Bell And Hiller Win Design Competition

THE Army has chosen Bell Helicopter Company of Fort Worth, Tex., and Hiller Aircraft Corporation of Palo Alto, Calif., as winners among 12 companies in a design competition for a new Light Observation Helicopter.

The Army will spend more than $200 million to procure about 4,000 of these aircraft over a period of about 10 years, according to present plans.

The new LOH, which will be chosen for production about two years hence, is intended to replace the current inventory of 200 L-19 fixed wing aircraft, H-13 and H-23 helicopters.

Some Army officials say that future plans may call for assignment of one LOH to every rifle company. It is known that the new Army division structure will call for increased use of aircraft.

The Army has specified that the four-place LOH must have an endurance of at least three hours, a speed of 110 knots, with a 1,000 hour life for components. It will be powered by a T-63 gas turbine engine being developed by the Allison Division of General Motors.

The Navy's Bureau of Weapons was responsible, in coordination with Army agencies, for the technical analysis which led to the decision in favor of Bell and Hiller.

It is anticipated that each company will build seven prototypes for test and evaluation.

Plane Choice

Army Vice CofS General Clyde D. Eddleman and his staff recently visited Nellis AFB, Nev., and Camp Lejeune, N. C.

The Army Staff recommended to General Eddleman that the Navy's Douglas A4D would be the better aircraft for the close support mission.

At a meeting in Dr. Brown's office, General Eddleman stated that the Army would agree to whatever aircraft the Air Force wants to provide. This put the decision up to Dr. Brown, who shortly must make his recommendation on the matter to Secretary of Defense McNamara.

The Air Force, represented at the meeting by Chief of Staff-designate General Curtis E. LeMay, urged acceptance of the Republic F-105 for the Army combat role.

The Navy's Deputy CNO for Air VADM. Robert B. Pirie urged Dr. Brown to choose the A4D.

General Eddleman's hesitancy to recommend one aircraft for the close support role is attributed to the fact that no decision has been reached as to which Service—the Army or Air Force—will pay for the new aircraft. Some Army officials are fearful that strong pressure for the A4D would be followed by Air Force insistence that the Army pay the whole bill.

AF Orders Thors For Space Tasks

The Air Force has ordered 22 DM-21 Thor rockets from the Douglas Aircraft Company for use as boosters in space programs.

The DM-21 model has a shorter, lighter airframe than earlier versions and has a more powerful 165,000-pound thrust engine. Earlier engines produced 150,000 pounds of thrust.

The new vehicles are slated for additional Air Force Discoverer firings, the Navy's Transit Navigation satellite program, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Nimbus meteorological satellite program and other projects. Thor also has been selected by NASA to boost its polar-orbiting geophysical observatory satellite.

TI Issues Booklets On Radar, Missiles

Two new booklets, "Missile Electronic Systems" and "Heavy Surface Radar," have been issued by Texas Instruments, Inc., Apparatus Division.

"Missile Electronic Systems" has sections on Fire Control, Guidance, Telemetry, Computers, Controls, and Transponders. "Heavy Surface Radar" discusses radar systems, radar data processing, and reliability and support. Copies may be obtained from the company at 6000 Lemon Avenue, Dallas 9, Tex.

Cheaper Start For Jet Engines

An inexpensive method of starting jet aircraft engines has been developed by engineers at North American Aviation's Columbus, Ohio, Division.

Pressurized air from the plant's own system is used instead of mobile compressor units.

Jets are started by compressed air forced into the engine to begin turning a turbine. Mobile compressor outfits vary in cost from $25,000 to $120,000. Their lifetime is limited, so the average cost per engine start is high.

At North American, which produces the Navy Mach 2 A3J Vigilante attack bomber, many jet engine starts are made daily, both for laboratory tests and checkout flights.

North American plant engineers designed a simple $4,500 starting unit with only three moving parts and an almost unlimited lifetime. It pipes pressurized air from the plant's lines into the jet engine turbine.

A pilot or flight mechanic presses a switch in the aircraft's cockpit which automatically opens a valve to allow the pressurized air to pass through a simple regulator into a flexible hose connected to the engine's turbine section.

Once the turbine rotates fast enough to start the engine, the pressurized air is shut off swiftly—within a half a second—and the hose disconnected from the plane. The entire start takes less than half a minute.

Lockheed Space Man Wins Air Force Award

JAMES W. Plummer, Deputy Director of Special Space Programs for the Lockheed Missiles and Space Division Sunnyvale, Calif., receives an award from the Air Force for his work on the successful Discoverer series of satellites. Of 23 Discoverer launches, 16 have achieved orbit, and four capsules have been recovered. Mr. Plummer was manager of the Lockheed Discoverer Program before assuming his broader duties. Presenting the Scroll of Appreciation is Brig. Gen. Robert E. Greer, Center, Deputy Commander of the Air Force Space Systems Division. At right is Col. L. C. Battle, Air Force Director of the Discoverer Program.

MOON TASK GOES TO MARTIN

A STUDY to investigate various methods of manned transportation between the earth and the moon has been assigned by NASA to The Martin Company, Baltimore. The contract is for the study of launch vehicle systems for lunar exploration beyond the initial Project Apollo flight, contemplated by NASA as a manned vehicle to carry three men in wide orbit around the moon. The Martin Company is one of three space firms which have completed $250,000 feasibility studies on Apollo.

According to E. E. Clark, Director of Advanced Design at Martin's Baltimore Division, the new earth-lunar study covers the transportation systems required for these three basic missions: 1. A lunar landing and immediate return to earth for three men; 2. A 30-day stay on the moon for three men, and 3. A permanent moon base which would accommodate 10 to 12 men.

The $75,000 initial study contract covers a wide variety of problems, including those of boosting the vehicles into space, soft-landing them on the moon and returning them to earth again.

The study also will consider vital provisions for man's extended existence in the space and lunar environments.

On the moon itself, for example, there must be shelter against violent temperature changes. Each lunar day or night is as long as 14 earth days. During such periods, and due to the absence of measurable atmosphere, temperatures rise as high as 244 degrees Fahrenheit. During the long night they drop as low as 213 degrees below zero.

Man is expected to find no form of life on the moon suitable for nourishment. Therefore, he must take with him the food he eats, the water he drinks and the air he breathes.

Northrop Building Wings That "Inhale," In $30-Million Laminar Flow Control Test

Longer wings that "inhale" air is a feature of two WB-66D aircraft being rebuilt by Northrop's Norair Division under a $30 million laminar flow control program sponsored by the Air Force Systems Command.

Laminar flow control is expected to extend the range, flying endurance or payload of large aircraft 50 per cent or more without increased fuel consumption.

The rebuilt WB-66Ds will be powered by two GE J-79 engines. The engine nacelles will be mounted aft on the fuselage. Suction turbines will be mounted beneath the wings. The pumping system is being developed by the AirResearch Manufacturing Division of Garrett Corporation.

The new wings will have a span of 93.5 feet compared with the original 72.5-foot WB-66 wings, and wing area will be increased from 780 to 1,250 square feet. Fine slots will be cut in the wing surface through which air will be drawn in and exhausted rearward to eliminate air turbulence.

Lt. Gen. Bernard A. Schriever, commander of the Systems Command, calls laminar flow control a "real breakthrough" in the Service's search for a method of extending range and endurance without increasing aircraft gross weight.

Sperry Names New V.P.

Appointment of Frank L. Roberts to the new post of Vice President and Assistant to the President of the Sperry Gyroscope Corporation is announced by Carl A. Frische, President.

Earlier he headed the Military Renegotiation Policy Board under the Secretary of Defense. From 1946 to 1948 he was a member of the War Department's Price Adjustment Board in Washington. He had joined the government in 1942 on renegotiation assignments.

The new Sperry vice president and his wife, the former Diane Smith of Washington, reside at 5181 Manning Place, N.W., Washington, D. C.

"Worried" Chairman Vinson Writes SecDef McNamara

organization Act, the House and Senate Armed Services Committees declared explicitly that each of the three military departments "will be separately organized under its own Secretary," and "Each military Secretary will be responsible to the Secretary of Defense for the operation of that military department."

The Act further states that no Assistant Secretary of Defense can "issue orders to a military department" unless the Secretary of Defense provides "a specific delegation of authority in writing in a specific area."

Even when this condition is fulfilled, however, the Act provides that the Assistant Secretaries can issue such orders only "through" the military Secretary or his designee.

In the conference report on the Reorganization Act, the House and Senate said the Assistant Secretaries of Defense "will not be senior to, or have greater authority than, the military Secretaries." For practical purposes, the conferees said, the Assistant Secretaries will "remain as principal staff assistants to the Secretary of Defense."

The purpose of retaining this civilian chain of command, the Congress observed, was to "eliminate the confusion" that might result if orders "were not channeled through the military Secretaries."

Chairman Vinson, who led the fight to have these provisions inserted in the legislation, now wants Secretary McNamara's reassurance that the spirit and letter of the law are being observed. Chairman Vinson is concerned over news stories and editorials which have indicated that the Service Secretaries are being edged out of the picture at the Pentagon.

In keeping with Secretary McNamara's announced plan to tighten the reins on public information issuing from the Pentagon, details of various policy shifts within the Defense Department have not been fully aired.

This development runs counter to the philosophy often expressed by Chairman Vinson that "the public has a right to know." It is recalled that at the start of hearings on the 1958 Reorganization Act, he declared, "The American people are entitled to full information on this matter. They supply the sons and daughters who constitute our Armed Forces; they supply the money to support these forces. They have the right to be fully informed."

AF Bandleader Cited

Col. George S. Howard, Conductor of the USAF Band, has been honored by the National Association for American Composers and Conductors. He was awarded a special citation for "outstanding contribution to the furtherance of American music."

The presentation, made by Mr. Richard Russell Bennett, Chairman of the Awards Committee, cited Colonel Howard for having performed the works of 140 American composers and for having featured in excess of 1,000 American musical compositions before audiences of 46 countries on five continents.

we use all of the arts of communication to serve you better

One of our biggest capabilities is providing defense communications—wherever needed.

If we can't fill communications needs off the shelf, then we'll start fresh and create the answers to the problems. We've done that hundreds of times.

We recently handled the world's first telephone conversation via satellite. And we have started development of a world-wide communications system employing satellites.

We developed the world's first undersea telephone cables to speed calls between continents.

When industry and government needed a way of gathering huge amounts of coded information from distant points, we were ready with our vast telephone network and Data-Phone, which transmits at extremely high speeds.

Far in the frozen north, our engineers are putting together the communications system for BMEWS, the nation's Ballistic Missile Early Warning System.

For strategic defense installations, we provide a Group Alert and Dispatching System making it possible for one pull of the dial to ring up to 480 telephones simultaneously.

Universal communications—the finest, most dependable anywhere—are what we deliver. Inside, outside, on land, under the sea, through the air, or into space.

We invite inquiries.

Budget Bureau Considers AF Promotion Crisis

From first page—

will be no temporary promotions above captain.

General White has said that the officer promotion situation and the need for accrual flight pay legislation are the two most critical manpower problems in the Air Force.

The bleak promotion picture in the Air Force is pointed up in the fact that of approximately 6000 captains in their 13th and 14th year of active commissioned or promotion list service who were chosen for temporary major in fiscal '61, only 2500 have been promoted.

The other 3500 must wait until fiscal '62, provided that the OGLA is amended. If the relief is not provided and if the temporary legislation authorizing the 3000 additional majors is not extended, 1000 of the captains selected in fiscal '61 would be forced to wait until fiscal '63 for their promotions.

Similarly, in fiscal '61, 1900 majors with 19 years service were chosen for lieutenant colonel. Only 600 can be promoted through 30 June. There will be 1200 promotions in fiscal '62, but 100 must wait until fiscal '63.

If new legislation is not voted, at this session, no additional selections will be made in fiscal '62.

Testifying on Capitol Hill, Maj. Gen. E. S. Ligon, jr., Air Force Director of Personnel Planning, has declared:

"A general revision of the OGLA is vital to the Air Force, both for its on-board officers and those whom it hopes to procure and retain. If some form of relief is not obtained by the Air Force in this session of Congress, active duty (temporary) promotions must be discontinued.

"This will mean," said General Ligon, "that we will only be able to promote Regular officers at the mandatory permanent promotion service phase points of 14 years to major and 21 years to lieutenant colonel. No Reserve officer can be promoted on active duty above the grade of captain."

The Budget Bureau decision to give "urgent consideration" to the Air Force proposal comes after the Defense Department decided finally to transmit the legislative request. Budget Bureau approval is essential before the measure can go to Capitol Hill.

Air Force leaders have been seeking legislative action since 1959. During the current session, Secretary Zuckert and General White have made it a point during their testimony before House and Senate Committees to stress the need for OGLA action.

Aside from the Congressional testimony, Air Force officials are restricted, however, in their efforts to gain support for the OGLA legislation. Until the Defense Department and the Budget Bureau state their positions and an Administration stand is taken, Air Force people are under wraps with regard to public discussion of the promotion and accrual pay problems.

Air Force officials are hopeful that the OGLA and Accrual Pay Bills will be considered separately on Capitol Hill. There is a growing concern that unless the legislation is submitted within the next few weeks, the opportunity for a full presentation of the facts of each case could be jeopardized.

The Air Force and Navy had hoped last year that Accrual Pay legislation, now known as Requitel Pay, might be voted by 1 April. But now the hope is for passage by 1 July.

Hit the moving target sooner! Make the missiles fly faster. Increase payloads, increase range, decrease missile size! ■ These urgent demands call for more push per pound of solid propellant—and per dollar. And squeezing more and more energy out of fuels is a big part of our solid work at GCR. Recent example: Nitroplastisol—new double-base composite-type propellant. Immediate application: Army's new Mauler mobile ground-to-air missile. Future uses: high mass-ratio upper-stage motors, small ICBM, ejection motors, orbit and retro motors, and many more. GRAND CENTRAL ROCKET COMPANY
